

Joseph Priestley

C

Reputation: 4

Impact: 7

Controversy: 1

(1733 –1804) His most famous discovery was soda water. Examined air, which at the time was thought to be a single element. By heating red mercuric oxide, he obtained a colourless gas that made a candle flame burn brightly. French chemist Lavoisier identified this as oxygen.